CO-TEACHING REQUIREMENTS

The goal of co-teaching is for all students to get high-quality instruction. Co-teaching can support teachers in implementing IEP and 504 plan goals in a general education classroom. The following table outlines five co-teaching strategies. You are required to write and implement one co-taught lesson using one of the strategies below. The lesson may be co-taught with your Mentor Teacher, General Education teacher, Instructional Assistant, or other personnel, as approved by your University Coach.

Strategy	What does it look like? When is it used? How do we plan?	Benefits
Station Teaching	What does it look like? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The class is divided into three or more groups who work in multiple learning centers. As the students rotate through the stations, the teachers teach the same material in different ways to each group. Different learning stations are set up in various areas of the classroom, one for each teacher and at least one for independent student work. Example: One teacher might lead a station where the students play a money math game and the other teacher could have a mock store where the students purchase items and make change. When is it used? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> When co-teachers have varying depths of knowledge on a topic and the students would benefit from differentiated instruction How do we plan? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The co-teaching pair divides the instructional content into parts. Each teacher instructs one of the groups, groups then rotate or spend a designated amount of time at each station – often an independent station will be used along with the teacher led stations. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Provides both teachers with an active instructional role Allows teachers to use flexible grouping to tailor teaching to each groups' needs Lowers the student-teacher ratio Resets student focus with each station rotation, increasing engagement Provides time for students to engage with the content on their own as well as with teachers Allows for more material to be covered in a shorter time frame Provides a clear teaching responsibility for each adult in the room
Team Teaching	What does it look like?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> From a students' perspective, there is no clearly defined leader – as both teachers share the instruction, are free to interject

Strategy	What does it look like? When is it used? How do we plan?	Benefits
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Both teachers teach at the front of the room and move about to check in with students (as needed). Well planned, team-taught lessons, exhibit an invisible flow of instruction with no prescribed division of authority. Using a team teaching strategy, both teachers are actively involved in the lesson. Example: Both instructors can share the reading of a story or text so that the students are hearing two voices. When is it used? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> When students would benefit from learning content and skills using multiple strategies and having access to more than one teacher’s experience and perspective. How do we plan? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The co-teaching pair co-plans the same lesson and then divides the instructional content into parts. 	information, and available to assist students and answer questions. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Provides both teachers with an active instructional role Introduces students to complementary teaching styles and personalities Allows for lessons to be presented by two different people with different teaching styles Models multiple ways of presenting and engaging with information Models for students what a successful collaborative working relationship can look like Provides more opportunities to pursue teachable moments that may arise
Parallel Teaching	What does it look like? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The class is divided into two groups, and both teachers teach the same information simultaneously in different sections of the room. Each teacher instructs half the students. The two teachers are addressing the same instructional material and presenting the material using the same teaching strategy. Example: Both teachers are leading a question and answer discussion on specific current events and the impact they have on our economy. When is it used? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> When teachers have equal content expertise and there’s a lot of information being covered in one lesson How do we plan?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The greatest benefit to this approach is the reduction of student to teacher ratio. Provides both teachers with an active instructional role Gives students the chance to ask more questions during lesson time

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The co-teaching pair co-plans the same lesson and then divides the instructional content into parts. Each teacher instructs on the same lesson but approaches it differently.
Supplemental Teaching	What does it look like? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> This strategy allows one teacher to work with students at their expected grade level, while the other teacher works with those students who need the information and/or materials retaught, extended, accelerated or remediated. Example: One teacher may work with students who need re-teaching of a concept while the other teacher works with the rest of the students on enrichment. When is it used? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> When students need the lesson re-taught, extended, remediation, additional information or accelerated teaching. How do we plan? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The co-teaching pair co-plans the same lesson and then divides the instructional content. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Provides both teachers with an active instructional role Lowers the student-teacher ratio and reduces the load of teaching a large class Allows for small group instruction Gives students the chance to ask more questions during lesson time
Alternative Teaching	What does it look like? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> One teacher is at the front of the room or roaming providing large group instruction, while the other teacher works with a small group of students in a different space. One teacher instructs most of the class while the other teacher teaches an alternate or accommodated version of the lesson to a smaller group of students. The learning outcome is the same for all students, however, the avenue for getting there is different. Example: One instructor may lead a group in predicting prior to reading by looking at the cover of the book and the illustrations, etc. The other instructor accomplishes the same 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Alternative teaching strategies provide two different approaches to teaching the same information. The learning outcome is the same for all students however the avenue for getting there is different. Provides both teachers with an active instructional role Allows for a lower student-teacher ratio Provides additional support to struggling students without specifically singling them out Gives a chance to re-teach, review, and pre-teach Allows for intervention as well as enrichment opportunities

Strategy	What does it look like? When is it used? How do we plan?	Benefits
	outcome but with his/her group, the students predict by connecting the items pulled out of the bag with the story. When is it used? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • When there is a small group of students who need pre- or re-teaching of skills or content or who would benefit from enrichment on the topic. How do we plan? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • One teacher instructs most of the class while the other teacher teaches an alternate or accommodated version of the lesson to a smaller group of students. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Allows teachers use flexible groups

Note: The strategies are not hierarchical – they can be used in any order and/or combined to best meet the needs of the students in the classroom.
